“ Oh Stover. November 17th will be 6 years you’ve been gone. I can’t believe it, I remember the day Shane and JJ came and picked me up, and broke the news to me. I couldn’t stop crying, couldn’t come to terms with the fact that you were actually gone. When someone is gone, I don’t think you ever really come to terms with it, I think you just continue to live life because you know that’s what they want you to do. We spent so many late nights, figuring out plans for me to go home, or how to keep me safe. But I never felt like I was ready. And I wasn’t then, I was sucked into the darkness for another 2 years after you left. But now I’m writing this message to you with 4 years clean under my belt. 4 years!! We both would be laughing if I told you that, but I know that laughing fit would be followed by the biggest hug, and a peaceful motorcycle ride. I think about you often. I hope you’re up there raising hell. Love always, your friend, Becca.
